Gaps and inequalities in hospital care exist across Europe, impacting patient safety, clinical outcomes and health system costs. Hospital pharmacists play a key role in the delivery of hospital care but varying standards exist across Europe. This is why the European Association of Hospital Pharmacists (EAHP) is bringing together patients and professionals for a two day Summit to set new standards in hospital pharmacy care.

EAHP invites members of the media to join the Summit discussions, where hospital pharmacists, patients and other healthcare professionals will finalise and vote on a charter setting out new benchmarks for the future role of hospital pharmacists in Europe. The Summit will cover issues including patient safety, clinical services, and education and research, developed with the input of patients and other healthcare professionals.
